DETAILED ACTION

This office action is in response to remarks filed on December 15, 2010. Claims 1 and 3-11 are pending.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1 and 3-11 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 5-8 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims., and subject to overcoming the rejections as discussed below

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 1 and 3-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Art Unit: 2431

3. Regarding claim 1, 9 and 10: Applicant claims “generating an element and storing the element” in first limitation. Applicant further claims in third limitation “deduce the element”. It’s not clear to examiner what does it mean in the context of scope of claim. Are these two elements same? Or different? Solving a system of independent equation can generate both scenarios. Applicant further claim "deducing from the obtained element". It is not clear from where this element was obtained i.e. from the database or form the equation.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

1. Claim 10 is rejected under 35 USC 101 since the claims are directed to non-statutory subject matter. Claim 10 is directed towards a computer readable medium including code stored thereon which appears to cover both transitory and non-transitory embodiments. The specification does not recite computer readable medium”, and no specific definition is provided to define this claimed term. The United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) is required to give claims their broadest reasonable interpretation consistent with the specification during proceedings before the USPTO. See In re Zletz, 893 F.2d 319 (Fed. Cir. 1989) (during patent examination the pending claims must be interpreted as broadly as their terms reasonably allow). The broadest reasonable interpretation of a claim drawn to a computer readable medium

(also called machine readable medium and other such variations) typically covers forms of non-transitory tangible media and transitory propagating signals per se in view of the ordinary and customary meaning of computer readable media, particularly when the specification is silent.

See MPEP 2111.01. When the broadest reasonable interpretation of a claim covers a signal per se, the claim must be rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 101 as covering non-statutory subject matter.

See In re Nuijten, 500 F.3d 1346, 1356-57 (Fed. Cir. 2007) (transitory embodiments are not directed to statutory subject matter) and Interim Examination Instructions for Evaluating Subject Matter Eligibility Under 35 U.S.C. § 101, Aug. 24, 2009; p. 2.

2. The Examiner suggests that the Applicant add the limitation “non-transitory computer-readable storage medium” to the claim(s) in order to properly render the claims in statutory form in view of their broadest reasonable interpretation in light of the originally filed specification.

The examiner also suggests that the specification be amended to include the term “non-transitory computer-readable storage medium” to avoid a potential objection to the specification for a lack of antecedent basis of the claimed terminology.”

4. Claim 9 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claim 9 is not statutory because they are directed towards a system... comprising calculation means which could be implemented via software alone. Claims to software per se are not statutory. Applicant must recite some form of hardware as part of the claimed system to overcome this rejection.
